The Church, the Economy, and Social Justice: Reflections on Caritas in Veritate

Opening remarks by Erik Owens

AssociateDirector
Boisi Center for Religion and American Public Life
Boston College

THURSDAY, OCTOBER8, 2009 5:00-6:30 PM

GASSON305,BOSTONCOLLEGE CHESTNUT HILL, MASSACHUSETTS

We are here today to reflect on Pope Benedict' X vecent encyclical Caritas in Veritate, a treatise on the nature of the person and on the structures of somethyding the market economy that promote or mider the authentic development of human relations. Its title phrase is translated once in the document as "love in truth," but otherwise it is consistently including in its titular first passage rendered a charity in truth." Released at the end of devanidst a deep global recession and a vigorous international debate over the merits and demerits of market capitalism, the document couldn't be more timely. A relatively long encyclical at more than 30,tio1 of Christian Ethics and past president of both the Catholic Theological Society of America and the Association for Social Economics. He received his M.A. in economics and a PhD. in religious ethics on the University of Chicago.

ROBERT IMBELLI is Associate Pofessor of theology Boston College and a priest of the Archdiocese of New York. Father Imbelli completed his S.T.L. at the Gregorian University in Rome and his Ph.Dt. Yale University. He writes on systematic theology, Christology, Trinitarian theology, and Christian spirituality; he is the editor of Handing on the Faith: the Church's Mission and Challen The former director of BC's Institute of Religious Education and Pastoral Ministry (IREP, Ma) has served on the board of the Catholic Theological Society of America.

STEPHEN POPE is Professor of Theology at Boston College, wherewhites and teaches on a wide range of issueshitrotogical and social ethics, drawing upon fundamental themes of justice, love, virtue, forgiveness, reconciliation and the natural law in Catholic Social Thought. The social and natural sciences have been a consistent topic of his work, through numeroustiales and two books, including The Evolution of Altruism and the Ordering of Loveand most recently, Human Evolution and Christian Ethics He is also the editor of four books on theological or social ethics, and holds a Ph.D. from the University of Chargo.

* * *

We are delighted to hothese three distinguished panelists for a discussion on the Church, the economy, and social justice. We have asked Professor frienaktofor about 20 minutes in the encyclical and its implications for theologiethics and economics professors imbelli and Popewill then each have 10 minutes for their remarks. The remaining 45 minutes will be open for discussion with the audience to get started with Prof. Finn.

* * *